Congratulations to David Dunlop and his documentary film team who were recently awarded the 2009 CINE Golden Eagle Award for Excellence in Film and Television Production for the PBS series, "Landscapes Through time With David Dunlop." In August the series was awarded a 2009 Daytime Emmy for Outstanding Writing. "We find it very gratifying that our series about painting and creativity has received such lovely recognition and feel that it highlights the importance of art in our world today," said Dunlop. "I know that all of you will agree with that!" Dunlop added that they are in pre-production for their second series.

About the CINE Golden Eagle Awards

CINE Golden Eagle awards, which honor excellence in professional and independent works, are recognized internationally as symbols of the highest production standards in film and television production. Since its founding in 1957, CINE has been dedicated to discovering, rewarding, educating and supporting established and emerging talent in film and video.

Great talents whose first films were awarded the CINE Golden Eagle include Steven Spielberg, Ron Howard, and Ken Burns, and filmmakers such as Robert Zemeckis, Mike Nichols, Martin Scorsese, Mira Nair, Charles Guggenheim, Stanley Nelson, Albert Maysles, and Frederick Wiseman have also been recipients of the Golden Eagle Award.

More than 300 judges viewed and evaluated hundreds of entries for the recently completed competition. They judged the entries using standards of overall excellence, evaluating such criteria as storytelling, production value, artistry, the extent to which the film meets its stated goals and communicates with its intended audience, and overall excellence. Finally, a Golden Eagle Award-winning production must demonstrate an overall excellence that separates it from productions similar in content, genre or style.
